

Would You Like to Lead a Class for ICL?

The Institute for Continuing Learning is constantly seeking and in need of good instructors who are willing to share their experience and expertise with our membership. There are no “requirements” for teaching credentials or past experience. If you have a passion for any particular subject and would like to tell others about it, please join us! We are open to any and all subject matter. From literature to parlor games; from watercolors to music; from science to Appalachian history, ICL is an open canvas waiting for your own unique brush strokes. Some of the classes that have been offered in the past include:

Tree Identification	Genealogy	Appalachian Literature
Mountain Gardening	Ukulele	Watercolors/Painting
Mahjong/Bridge/Pinochle	Birding	Financial/Economics
Wine Appreciation/Wine Making	Hiking	Photography
Working with Photoshop	Local History	Cooking
Elder Law	Soap Making	Medicinal Herbs
Literature	Poetry	Health/Nutrition
Technology	Local History	Religion
Science	Music	World History
Yoga	College Sports	Philosophy

ICL terms last for 8 weeks and roughly conform to the Young Harris College academic calendar. Instructors enjoy wide flexibility in how classes are scheduled. Some classes are taught weekly for one or two hours. Some classes may run only 4 weeks. It is all left up to the instructor. Our leaders are not paid employees; in fact, ICL has no paid employees. However, an honorarium is offered to those who teach which equates roughly to about $25 per hour.

If you know a lot about a particular subject and enjoy talking about it, please favorably consider joining the team.

ICL an all-volunteer nonprofit organization and excess profits are annually donated to YHC.
